

Meet our Veteran Build Families:

Leroy, a United States Marine Corps Veteran served from 1977 to 1983. He is a single father of two children, Quiana and Enrique. Leroy has been a dedicated staff member of Carestream Health for over 12 years. As natives of Greeley, they look forward to building a home in the community they love.

"Having a home that we can afford, maintain, and enjoy has been a longtime dream of mine. I look forward to my children having their own rooms and a safe place to play, grow, and thrive. Thank you for giving us this opportunity!" -Leroy

The Hamm Family lived in a three-bedroom home and their rent was extremely expensive and the home was very unsafe because the landlord had no interest in upkeep or repairing existing problems.

James was medically retired from the US Army in 2014, and the rent was far more than what they could afford so he started doing side jobs as a handyman to try and make ends meet. In their 6 years of living in Colorado James and his family had moved at least 3 times. For the eldest son, they thought that another short-term move would harm his ability to stay focused in school. They are excited about their new home and look forward to all the opportunities this home will open to them.

"I don't have words for how thankful I am." Zachary Reyes, the veteran who is to receive the home that is at the center of the first-ever veteran's build in the state of Colorado, feels like he has "won the lottery." Zachary and his wife Tiffany are parents to two children who both have big plans for decorating their own rooms, something they have never experienced.

"We applied for our children" Tiffany states, mentioning that they have never lived where the kids could go out and play with friends. "We are excited that they can have friends now," she says.

Zachary is no stranger to discomfort, enlisted in the Navy during the Iraq war, but discomfort for your children is something else. In those coldest winter months, Zachary would crawl under their disintegrating home to thaw the pipes with a torch so that the family would have running water.

"Our living conditions will be 100 times better than what they were," says Tiffany. This is a family with new hope.

Building with Habitat is Good for Business

When your employees engage with a day of building on a Habitat work site you can:

- Increase employee retention
- Improve employee skills
- Improve employee health
- Improve team communication
- Develop leaders
- Increase your appeal for future employees

You will see the impact of your contribution and feel the satisfaction of knowing that impact will last for generations.

“Volunteering at Habitat for Humanity not only builds homes, but also constructs bridges between corporations and communities. It fosters a culture of empathy and teamwork among employees, enriching their personal and professional lives. Corporate partnerships are strengthened, reflecting a commitment to social responsibility. Thus, the act of giving extends beyond immediate beneficiaries, creating a ripple effect of positivity and growth.” - Matt Wells Regulatory Advisor, Oxy

The Housing Crisis

The National Low Income Housing Coalition finds that 2.5 million veterans heading households are at least 55 years of age. Of those 2.5 million veterans, 24 percent have housing cost burdens.

Older veterans are more likely to have a disability — 35 percent versus 28 percent — which may require home modifications, health, and other supportive services as they age. Nearly 4 million of our veterans pay at least 30 percent of their income toward rent or mortgage, while more than 1.5 million pay at least 50 percent.

Meet The Quesada Family

This family made up of a proud veteran and father of three bright, elementary-aged children. For years, he worked in the oil and gas industry, but when his youngest daughter became seriously ill, he made the choice to change careers so he could have the flexibility to take her to the many doctor’s appointments she required.

Frankie continues to work hard to provide for his children and to create opportunities for them to flourish, even in difficult circumstances. What they long for most now is what a Habitat home makes possible—the stability of a safe and secure place to call their own.

Habitat for Humanity’s Veterans Build program is a national initiative to serve veterans with new homes, critical home repairs, and employment opportunities. We believe every veteran should have a sustainable, affordable housing opportunity and to have a base on which to build their lives and futures.
